1 Introduction

`mareimekomot` (מראי מקומות, "references") writes references to Tanakh, Talmud, halakhah, Midrash and later works. A reference is written once and comes out in the language of the text around it:

Command	English	Hebrew
`\tanach{gen}{37:18-20}`	Genesis 37:18–20	בראשית ל״ז, י״ח–כ׳
`\bavli{menachot}{69b}`	B. Menaḥot 69b	בבלי מנחות ס״ט ע״ב
`\shulchanaruch{oh}{605:1}`	Shulḥan Arukh, Oraḥ Ḥayyim 605:1	שו״ע או״ח סי׳ תר״ה סע׳ א׳
`\sefer{bereshitrabbah}{38:13}`	Bereshit Rabbah 38:13	בראשית רבה ל״ח, י״ג

So a book or paper can cite the same way in its Hebrew and English passages, and a bilingual source sheet can give each source one heading that serves both languages. The package was written for the `shiur` package, which typesets source sheets and loads it, but it needs nothing from `shiur` and works in any document.

The printed English follows one transliteration: ḥ for ח and kh for כ (Menaḥot, Berakhot), and e for a vocal shva (Seforno, Keli Yakar). The keys you type are matched loosely, so any usual spelling works (section 2).

1.1 Loading

The package needs XeLaTeX or LuaLaTeX, and `polyglossia` with Hebrew as one of the languages, and a font with Hebrew:

\usepackage{polyglossia}
\setdefaultlanguage{english}
\setotherlanguage{hebrew}
\newfontfamily{\hebrewfont}{FreeSerif}[Script=Hebrew]
\usepackage{mareimekomot}

A reference is Hebrew wherever the current language is `hebrew`: inside `\texthebrew{...}` or a `hebrew` environment, or throughout a document whose main language is Hebrew. Everywhere else it is English. Without Hebrew loaded, everything comes out in English.

1.2 Options

Two settings change the style. They can be given as package options or, at any point in a document, with `\mareimekomotsetup`:

```
\usepackage[sham=full, daf=short]{mareimekomot}
\mareimekomotsetup{sham=full}

`sham=short` or `full` Whether `\sham` ("ad loc") also gives the reference it stands for, as "ad loc (B. Menaḥot 69b)" (section 8). The default is `short`.

`daf=long` or `short` Whether a daf in Hebrew is ס״ט ע״ב (`long`, the default) or the traditional :סט with a colon for the second side and a full stop for the first.

2 Keys and spelling

Books, tractates, sections, commentaries and works are named by keys, written in English letters: `gen`, `menachot`, `oh`, `rashi`, `tanchuma`. The full lists are in the appendix. Keys are matched loosely, so that whatever transliteration you use works:

- case, spaces, hyphens, full stops and apostrophes don't matter: `Bava Metzia`, `bava-metzia`, `bavametzia`;
- ch, kh and h are the same, as are tz, ts and z, and y and i: `menachot`, `menakhot`, `menahot`;
- doubled letters count as single, and a final h doesn't matter: `sukkah`, `sukka`, `suka`;
- a numeral at either end can be a number or Roman: `samuelii`, `2sam`, `samuel2`.

Some names have more keys, for forms that differ by more than that: `berachot` and `brachot`, `tosafot` and `tosfot`. A key the package doesn't know is an error, which names it.

Commands whose names have ח or כ can be spelt with ch or kh: `\tanach` and `\tanakh`, `\shulchanaruch` and `\shulkhanarukh`, `\aruchhashulchan` and `\arukhhashulkhan`, `\shach` and `\shakh`, and `\bach`, `\bakh` and `\bah`.

3 Tanakh

`\tanach{book}{reference}` takes a chapter (`14`), a verse (`37:18`), or a range within a chapter (`37:18-20`) or across chapters (`37:18-38:2`, or `37-38`). The starred form leaves out the book, for an addition such as "(+39:1)":

Command	English	Hebrew
`\tanach{gen}{37:18-20}`	Genesis 37:18–20	בראשית ל״ז, י״ח–כ׳
`\tanach{exodus}{14}`	Exodus 14	שמות י״ד
`\tanach{kings ii}{4:1-5:3}`	Kings II 4:1–5:3	מלכים ב׳ ד׳, א׳–ה׳, ג׳
`\tanach*{gen}{39:1}`	39:1	ל״ט, א׳

A commentary on a verse goes in the optional argument (section 7):

Command	English	Hebrew
`\tanach[rashi]{gen}{18:7}`	Rashi on Genesis 18:7	רש״י על בראשית י״ח, ז׳
`\tanach[onkelos]{deut}{6:5}`	Targum Onkelos on Deuteronomy 6:5	תרגום אונקלוס על דברים ו׳, ה׳

4 Talmud and Mishnah

`\bavli{tractate}{daf}` takes a daf as `69b`, `69`, `69b-70a` or `9a-b`, and `\bavli*{daf}` gives the daf alone. `\mishnah` and `\yerushalmi` take a chapter and its mishnah or halakhah, written like a verse:

Command	English	Hebrew
`\bavli{menachot}{69b}`	B. Menaḥot 69b	בבלי מנחות ס״ט ע״ב
`\bavli{yoma}{9a-b}`	B. Yoma 9a–b	בבלי יומא ט׳ ע״א–ע״ב
`\bavli*{127b}`	127b	קכ״ז ע״ב
`\mishnah{sukkah}{4:1}`	M. Sukkah 4:1	משנה סוכה ד׳, א׳
`\yerushalmi{berachot}{1:1-3}`	Y. Berakhot 1:1–3	ירושלמי ברכות א׳, א׳–ג׳

A commentary on a daf goes in `\bavli`'s optional argument. In Hebrew, a commentary is on the Bavli anyway, so בבלי is left out:

Command	English	Hebrew
`\bavli[tosafot]{menachot}{69b}`	Tosafot on B. Menaḥot 69b	תוספות מנחות ס״ט ע״ב
`\bavli*[rashi]{70a}`	Rashi on 70a	רש״י ע׳ ע״א

5 Codes

`\rambam{laws}{reference}` takes a set of laws of the Mishneh Torah, by a key such as `shofar`, `teshuvah` or `yesodeihatorah` (all 83 are in the appendix), and a chapter and law:

`\rambam{shofar}{2:6}`

Mishneh Torah, Laws of Shofar, Sukkah and Lulav 2:6

משנה תורה הלכות שופר וסוכה ולולב ב׳, ו׳

The Tur, the Shulḥan Arukh and the works arranged by them take a section (`oh`, `yd`, `eh` or `hm`) and a siman, optionally with a se'if (`605:1`), a range of se'ifim (`658:1-2`), or a range across simanim (`605:1-606:2`). Besides `\tur` and `\shulchanaruch` the package has `\beityosef`, `\darkeimoshe`, `\bach` and `\aruchhashulchan`, and the commentaries `\shach`, `\taz`, `\magenavraham` and `\mishnahberurah`, whose sub-unit is the se'if katan. The Magen Avraham and the Mishnah Berurah cover Oraḥ Ḥayyim only, so they take just the reference:

Command	English	Hebrew
`\shulchanaruch{oh}{605:1}`	Shulḥan Arukh, Oraḥ Ḥayyim 605:1	שו״ע או״ח סי׳ תר״ה סע׳ א׳
`\tur{yd}{114}`	Tur, Yoreh De'ah 114	טור יו״ד סי׳ קי״ד
`\shach{yd}{114:3}`	Shakh, Yoreh De'ah 114:3	ש״ך יו״ד סי׳ קי״ד ס״ק ג׳
`\darkeimoshe{oh}{605:3}`	Darkei Moshe, Oraḥ Ḥayyim 605:3	דרכי משה או״ח סי׳ תר״ה אות ג׳
`\mishnahberurah{605:3}`	Mishnah Berurah 605:3	משנה ברורה סי׳ תר״ה ס״ק ג׳

`\declaretursefer[options]{\command}{Hebrew}{English}` declares more such works:

```
\declaretursefer[seifkatan]{\pitcheiteshuvah}{פתחי תשובה}{Pitchei Teshuvah}
\declaretursefer[seifkatan, section=oh]{\shaarhatziyun}
  {שער הציון}{Shaar haTziyun}

Its options are `seifkatan`, for a sub-unit of ס״ק rather than ׳סע; `subunit=`, for any other (the Darkei Moshe's is אות); and `section=`, for a work on one section only, whose command then takes just the reference.

6 Midrash and other works

`\sefer{key}{...}` cites any other work, by its key and the parts of the reference, one argument each. `\sefer*` leaves out the work's name. The package knows these:

Key	Arguments	Example
bereshitrabbah, …	chapter:section	Bereshit Rabbah 38:13
tanchuma	parashah, section	Midrash Tanḥuma, Noaḥ 1
sifra	parashah, chapter:section	Sifra Emor 13:1
sifreidevarim	piska	Sifrei Devarim 32
mekhilta	parashah, masekhta, parashah	Mekhilta deRabbi Yishmael, Yitro, BaḤodesh 7
pirkeiderabbieliezer	chapter	Pirkei deRabbi Eliezer 35
midrashtehillim	psalm:section	Midrash Tehillim 23:1
midrashaggadah	book, chapter	Midrash Aggadah on Genesis 18
yalkutshimoni	book, remez	Yalkut Shimoni, Genesis 110
igrotmoshe	section, volume, siman	Igrot Moshe, Yoreh De'ah 1:62
mishnah, yerushalmi	tractate, chapter:mishnah	M. Sukkah 4:1
rambam	laws, chapter:law	Mishneh Torah, Laws of Repentance 3:4

The ten Rabbot are bereshitrabbah, shemotrabbah, vayikrarabbah, bamidbarrabbah, devarimrabbah, shirhashirimrabbah, ruthrabbah, eichahrabbah, koheletrabbah and estherrabbah. The Sifrei is sifreibamidbar or sifreidevarim. A parashah is named by a key such as noach, lechlecha or vezothaberachah. Hebrew has its own forms, so that `\sefer{igrotmoshe}{yd}{1}{62}` is

אגרות משה יו״ד חלק א׳ סי׳ ס״ב

The commands `\mishnah`, `\yerushalmi` and `\rambam` are short for `\sefer{mishnah}`, `\sefer{yerushalmi}` and `\sefer{rambam}`.

6.1 Declaring a work

\declaresefer[english={template}]{keys}{Hebrew}{English}{template} declares a work, anywhere before it is used. The template is what follows the work's name, with a placeholder for each argument of `\sefer`, which takes them in order:

Placeholder	Argument	English	Hebrew
#N	a number or range (4, 10–12)	4, 10–12	ד׳, י׳-י״ב
#R	a chapter and verse, as in `\tanach` (38:13)	38:13	ל״ח, י״ג
#D	a daf, as in `\bavli` (69b)	69b	ס״ט ע״ב
#T	a section of the Tur (oh)	Oraḥ Ḥayyim	או״ח
#B	a book of Tanakh (gen)	Genesis	בראשית
#M	a tractate (shabbat)	Shabbat	שבת
#P	a parashah (noach)	Noaḥ	נח
#H	a set of laws of the Mishneh Torah (shofar)	as in `\rambam`
#S	any text, or {Hebrew}{English}	as written

The template serves both languages. When English is written differently, english= gives it its own template, with the same placeholders in the same order. Spaces in a template are printed, so it usually starts with one; a space before #N, #R or #D doesn't break across lines, so a number stays with its label. The package declares Igrot Moshe like this:

```
\declaresefer[english={, #T #N:#N}]{igrotmoshe, igrosmoshe}
  {אגרות משה}{Igrot Moshe}{ #T חלק #N סי' #N}
```

Text for `#S` is printed as it is written, or given as `{Hebrew}{English}` for each language, as with the Mekhilta's masekhta:

```
\sefer{mekhilta}{yitro}{{בחדש}{BaḤodesh}}{7}
```

gives

Mekhilta deRabbi Yishmael, Yitro, BaḤodesh 7
מכילתא דרבי ישמעאל יתרו, מסכתא דבחדש, פרשה ז׳

A placeholder other than these, or an English template whose placeholders differ from the Hebrew one's, is an error.

7 Commentaries

`\tanach` and `\bavli` take a commentary in their optional argument. The package knows `rashi`, `ramban`, `ibnezra`, `rashbam`, `radak`, `sforno`, `chizkuni`, `orhachaim`, `baalhaturim`, `kliyakar`, `malbim`, `onkelos` and `yonatan`, mostly on verses, and `tosafot`, `rif`, `rabbeinuchananel`, `rashba`, `ritva`, `ran`, `meiri` and `maharsha`, mostly on a daf; any of them works on either. `\declarecommentary{keys}{Hebrew}{English}` adds more:

```
\declarecommentary{haamekdavar}{העמק דבר}{Ha'amek Davar}
```

The words a comment opens with go in the same optional argument: `dh=` for Hebrew, printed after ד״ה, and `sv=` for English, printed after s.v. Either alone serves both languages, and words with a comma go in braces:

```
\bavli[tosafot, dh=ואם תאמר, sv=ve'im tomar]{menachot}{69b}
```

gives

Tosafot on B. Menaḥot 69b s.v. ve'im tomar
תוספות מנחות ס״ט ע״ב ד״ה ואם תאמר

8 Ad loc

`\sham` gives שם or "ad loc". With a commentary, `\sham[rashi]` gives "Rashi ad loc" or רש״י שם. With `sham=full`, it also gives the reference it stands for, the last one made: "Rashi ad loc (B. Menaḥot 69b)".

A commentary's reference stands for its verse or daf, so after `\tanach[rashi]{gen}{18:7}`, `\sham[ibnezra]` is Ibn Ezra on the same verse. `\bavli*` and `\tanach*` don't change what `\sham` stands for, and within the parentheses of a full `\sham` the reference isn't made again.

A document that cites a source with no reference of the package's (a responsum declared nowhere, say) and then writes `\sham` would make it point at the wrong source. Packages that divide a document into sources can prevent that (section 11); `shiur` does.

9 Restyling and overriding

A later declaration replaces an earlier one. So a document, or a package of your own loaded after `mareimekomot`, can cite a built-in work in its own style, and the last declaration wins. A declaration that names any key of an existing work or commentary replaces it under all its keys, so redeclaring `igrotmoshe` changes `igrosmoshe` too, and redeclaring `nachmanides` changes `\tanach[ramban]`:

```
% "Mishnah Sukkah 4:1" rather than "M. Sukkah 4:1"
\declaresefer{mishnah}{משנה}{Mishnah}{\nobreakspace#M #R}
\declarecommentary{nachmanides}{רמב"ן}{Nachmanides}
\declaretursefer{\tur}{טור}{Arba'ah Turim}
```

While the package itself loads, two of its names whose keys match alike is an error, which keeps the built-in lists consistent; after that, a clash is a deliberate replacement.

10 Numbers and line breaks

Hebrew numbers take a geresh when they are one letter and gershayim before the last letter when they are more (ח׳, ל״ח, תר״ה); 15 and 16 are ט״ו and ט״ז. A chapter and verse is ל״ז, י״ח in Hebrew and 37:18 in English, and a range takes an en dash.

A reference never hyphenates. It breaks only between the words of a long name, as in the Mishneh Torah's, and at the dash of a range. Not every font has an en dash or ḥ (Taamey Frank CLM has no en dash, Trebuchet MS no ḥ), so the package checks the font in use: a range without an en dash takes a hyphen, and a missing ḥ is made from h and a dot below.

11 For package writers

Three commands let a package that divides a document into units (sources, sections) keep `\sham` from pointing past a unit with no reference:

`\mareimekomot@startunit` at the start of a unit;

`\mareimekomot@endunit` at its end: if no reference (or `\sham`) was made in the unit, `\sham` is cleared;

`\mareimekomot@forget` clears `\sham` at once.

A cleared `\sham` gives plain "ad loc", with nothing in parentheses, even with `sham=full`.

A Lists of names

The tables below are read from `mareimekomot.sty` when this manual is compiled, so they are always the package's own. Any key in a row names that row.

A.1 Books of Tanakh

Keys	English	Hebrew
`genesis, gen, bereshit, bereishit`	Genesis	בראשית
`exodus, ex, exod, shemot`	Exodus	שמות
`leviticus, lev, vayikra`	Leviticus	ויקרא
